February Focus

Donnas Valle d'Aoste 'Classico', 2011

If you enjoy Barolo but are searching for more minerals and elegance than tar and muscle, then look up a 1000 foot mountain ridge to Alpine wine from the Italian-French region of Valle d'Aoste. The vines grow in terraced vineyard blocks cut from layered granite and quartz in what looks like the biggest game of shoots and ladders you have ever seen. Earthy, spicy, wiry wines; hiking boots optional.

Nebbiolo + 10% Freisa and Neyret. Nebbiolo (locally called Picotendro) grown in this granite soil has more minerality and elegance; more nose than body. The 10% addition of Freisa and Neyret adds a wonderful sour-juicy element that makes the wine highly drinkable. The vineyard altitudes are 1300-1700 feet; terraced into the granite and quartz. The grapes are and harvested with the help of an Alpine rail system. After vinification, using native yeast, the wine spends 24 months in large Slavonian oak botti. It is then bottled unfiltered.
